

Greetings Friends,

It is overwhelming how people sacrificially give so our family can serve the Lord in a foreign land. We could never repay the repeated kindness you have shown. Instead we implore the Lord to sustain and bless as you faithfully serve Him. Yet we know every soul without Jesus Christ is without hope of everlasting life: having no persistent peace, nor enduring joy or lasting comfort. Instead they will spend eternity under His justified wrath; apart from God's glorious throne in heaven. Their need could not be greater.

Necessary preparations must be made while our family ventures back to Papua New Guinea. As a husband and father, I take my dearest earthly possession into a dark and dangerous place. Would you commit to praying for my family? We cannot last without God's thorough protection and daily provision. My plea is for a great harvest of souls. I am summarily desperate for God to enable me beyond my meager ability and to fulfill the ministry received. My personal need is laid bare.

Scripture declares the fervent prayer of the righteous will accomplish much. If you effectually join in prayer for God's ambassadors in every corner of the world, we can all expect God to do wonderful things. Some might question why passionate prayer is needed, and why we risk taking our families far from our native land. Let me be candidly clear on this crucial point: complete strangers are not worth more to me than my family, but God is worthy of all we can properly do for Him. The lost condition of billions requires our obedient involvement, the urgent call of missions confirms the duty that is ours alone, and our benevolent Father awaits our response. What shall we say?

Sincerely,
Brother Jason
